SUIT FOR HEAVY DAMAGES FAILS

Widow of Man Killed at Western Maryland Crossing Asks Twenty Thousand Dollars. Move to Transfer Trial here Unsuccessful.

Judge Swope on Tuesday evening filed an opinion in the case of Annie K. Eline vs the Western Maryland Railroad Company, sustaining the contention of the railroad and concluding the action in favor of the company. The case has attracted a great deal of attention both in York and Adams counties.

It arose through the tragic death on September 13, 1913, of J. Frank Eline at a Western Maryland railroad crossing on the York and Gettysburg pike, this side of York, when an automobile was struck by a train. Action was brought in York County Court by Mrs. Eline who asked $20,000 damages for the death of her husband. The case aroused a great deal of interest and lasted for a week.

While the jury was deliberating on the case, the attorneys for Mrs. Eline suffered a voluntary non-suit and later brought similar action in Adams County. A motion was made to quash the writ on the grounds of an error in service and because this Court had no jurisdiction, the railroad having complied with the requirements of the Act of 1911 and registered in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth setting forth York as its principal place of business.

The plaintiff's attorneys filed an alias subpoena and objection was again raised by the railroad on the ground that they had no right to issue it. The opinion of Judge Swope, filed on Tuesday evening, sustains this contention and the case is apparently at an end, the accident having occurred more than a year ago and further action being barred by the statute of limitations.

The Eline family are residents of Baltimore but have a number of relatives and friends in this county.

J. Cookman Boyd, Esq., of Baltimore, and J. Donald Swope, Esq., of Gettysburg, represented Mrs. Eline, and Charles S. Duncan, Esq., of Gettysburg, represented the Western Maryland Railroad.

MOVE TOWARD GOOD STREETS

Would Endeavor to Secure State Aid for Borough Highways. Town Council will Make Request in the Very Near Future.

The first step in a movement to give Gettysburg better streets was taken by the borough council Tuesday evening, when they passed a resolution looking toward a request to the State Highway Department for the construction of a State-aid road on Chambersburg street from Washington street to Centre Square, and on Baltimore street from the Square to Steinwehr avenue.

The plan would provide that the State pay half of a 16-foot roadway, the borough the remaining half. The entire width of the street would be paved with the same material and the trolley company would be expected to pay for eight feet, the remainder to be divided among the property owners and the borough. It is estimated that it would cost property owners from 80 cents to $1.00 per front foot.

The trading of the present borough horse for a larger animal was suggested and brought forth numerous comments. One member thought council ought not to go into the horse trading business and asked whether the property committee would have to give anything "to boot." Another thought the present faithful animal might fall into unkind hands or might even be sent to the war zone. Still another voiced the opinion that it might cost more to board a larger horse, while another believed that, if any change were to be made, a white animal would be more useful and more artistic than a bay horse. The matter was left in the hands of the property committee.

William B. Fleming, local representative of the State Highway Department asked for the use of the borough sweeper. Council granted it to him at $1.50 per day. The borough has not yet lifted the apparatus.

A request for a concrete crossing on the south side of South street was granted, to be effective as soon as contemplated pavements are laid.

Council decided to purchase from A. B. Plank the tank recently used in putting oil on the streets.

Pavement notices were ordered sent to a number of property owners.

The members present Tuesday evening were Messrs. Stock, Gilbert, Keith, Trostle, Dougherty, and Baughman.

Council adjourned to July 22 when further action will be taken on the street paving matter.

BOY LOST IN COUNTY HILLS

Fell Asleep while Horse was Taking him Home and Animal Wandered off the Road. Did not Return until Late the Next Day.

Falling asleep in his team while on his way home, at night, Wilbur, the 16 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ort, of near East Berlin, became lost in the Conewago hills, his horse leading him astray. As a result the youth caused his parents much worry and when he failed to return home a report spread that he had disappeared.

Young Ort had been attending the ox-roast in Dover. From there he is said to have taken a girl to her home near Emir's mill, Dover township, around the midnight hour. After leaving the girl's house, the boy started toward his home. Being fatigued he soon fell asleep. The horse took the wrong road, going over the Conewago hills.

When the boy awoke he found himself passing through a lonely road in the wooded lands. It was some time before he was able to find his way. He was driving toward Dillsburg when he discovered his mistake.

When the boy did not respond to the call of his parents Tuesday morning, to go to work, an investigation revealed that his bed had not been disturbed and the team had not been returned. Mr. Ort started for Dover where he started an investigation as to the whereabouts of his son. At the girl's home he was told that he had not been there Monday evening. Telephone calls failed to locate him.

Tuesday afternoon Mr. Ort started for York to employ detectives to locate him, it is said. While on his way to the county seat the boy returned to his home at two o'clock.

The Orts feared that their son had either been the victim of foul play, or had met with an accident, or had left his home.

EXPECT FIVE NEW PLAYERS

Efforts of Management to Secure Better Talent are Bearing Results. Both Infield and Outfield soon to be Strengthened.

Five new players for the Gettysburg base ball team are due to arrive here during the next few days and the line-up will present a changed and much improved condition over that shown on Tuesday afternoon.

Manager Plank has lined out for two new infielders and two new outfielders who will be due to supplant those men who have not been showing reasonable form during the past week. Mattress, of Annapolis, an Eastern League short stop, is expected to be here the latter part of this week, and Newton, a Tri-State infielder, has also been summoned. Tulley, of Reading, who was called home by an accident to his brother, will be back in time for a try-out in Thursday's game with Hagerstown.

Benny Williams is recovering nicely from the injury to his arm and it is believed that he can be used before the end of the week. The arm was not broken and the swelling is rapidly going down. Dutch Weimer will not be able to play and Burns has gone to his home in Hollidaysburg and will not be back again.

No effort will be spared now to put a winning aggregation in the field. The management and the directors have appreciated keenly the manner in which the support has continued in face of frequent defeats and they propose, if it is at all possible to get together a real team immediately. The pitching staff is generally agreed to be one of the best on the circuit and, with anything like reasonable support, should win their full share of games.

Thursday's double header with Hagerstown will start at 2:45 for the first game. The first game of Saturday's double header with Frederick will be started at two o'clock.

PLAN BENEFITS FOR FARMERS

Governor Brumbaugh will so Arrange Work of his Agricultural Experts that Best Results Can be Obtained. Secretary this Week.

The Adams County granges and other orchard and farm organizations are taking a keen interest in Governor Brumbaugh's plans for the re-organization of the Department of Agriculture which will really call for the aid of every citizen.

The Governor does not mean to stop at the re-organization of the administration of the department, but according to his present plans he means to make it the means of showing the people how they can increase yields, make loafing lands work and get more out of what he calls the by-products of farming, the chicken and the pig. The Governor will probably choose his secretary of agriculture this week and if he makes the announcement he will lose no time calling together the new commissioners and telling them what he wants done.

It is the idea of the Governor to have the re-organization of the office forces of the various bureaus fit in with the work he expects of them. The administrative end will be gradually changed. First and foremost, however, will be the framing of a program for agricultural advancement, conservation of the soil, betterment of rural life and the building up of a popular sentiment which will be reflected in the next Legislature and secure from it the funds necessary to make the department one of the most active in the government.

The Governor intends to make the department figure as much in the public eye as do the Health and Highway departments. The commissioners will divide up the state and make visits to the agricultural exhibitions and fairs, and in addition to finding out what are the needs of each locality will outline in an intimate way the Governor's plans.

The crowd voted to have a number of meetings at the park and an annual picnic. Some of the men talk of erecting bungalows on the ground.

July is one of the sales months in the calendar of live merchants.

It is the time the stores get ready for inventory and prepare to clear out broken lots.

It is the merchant's time for planning Fall business.

And so special values are frequently offered to the public.

This fact makes newspaper advertising in July so full of interest.

One may pick up the paper any time and find that it is offering just the things they need at prices much less than they expected to pay.

Damage Done by Lice. There are many species of plant lice. One of them is familiar as a destroyer of rose bushes. Another, known as the "green bug," attacks the wheat plant. In 1907 it devoured the equivalent of over one thousand million loaves of bread in Texas and Oklahoma alone.

A Hunter's Bluff

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

In the spring of the year 1868 a party of sporting hunters numbering thirty entered the elbow of Texas between New Mexico and the Indian territory. While the Comanche Indians were bitterly hostile at that time they had been sadly reduced by smallpox and driven to the north, and old frontiersmen stated their belief that the party would not even see one.

I had been invited to make one of the party, but was detained for a couple of days. I then mounted my horse and picked up the trail and followed after, having no fear that I should run any danger in thus riding.

It had come noon of the second day, and I had met with no adventure. I had baited and watered my horse and was ready to move on, when I heard a "Yi, yi, yi!" on my right, and I turned around to see five Comanches coming out of the timber on their ponies. They were just half a mile away and had evidently discovered me.

When a man risks for his life the greatest fear is in overdoing the matter. I had been five years on the plains and had a pretty fair stock of nerve, and I rode to favor my horse.

As the sun began to sink in the west they sought to shorten the distance between us and bring me into rifle shot, but a word to the mustang checkmated this.

Had I been able to keep the trail after 3 o'clock I should have counted on finding the party by sundown, as we were getting over the ground at a rapid pace, but at about that hour I came to a rough, stony district, where the passage of the horses had left no trail, and I went ahead at random, planning to keep my distance from the river. It was to be a starlight night, and as soon as dusk came I urged my beast to a faster pace and bore more to the left. When I believed I had gained a quarter of a mile I swerved sharply to the right, rode for forty rods and then dismounted and gave Custer the word to lie down. We were both flat on the earth when the party of pursuers swept by, and the thud, thud, thud of their ponies' feet came very plainly to my ears.

I had a cold bite in my haversack, and after disposing of it stretched out and went to sleep, hoping I had given the red men the slip. I opened my eyes the next morning in astonishment, seated in a circle about me were the five Comanches, while their ponies were feeding with my horse. I lay on my back with my hands clasped under my head, and such was my astonishment that I could not move. Fortunately for me they took this for nerve. I looked from man to man, and finally said in Comanche:

"Had I known you were Comanches I should not have run away. I thought you were Chickasaws on stolen horses. I shall be ready to go as soon as I have eaten. I want to see the Comanche country—the vast plains—the Canadian river—the mountains full of caves and waterfalls—your chief, Thunder Cloud."

One of them asked me if I belonged to the party ahead, and I told him no. He asked me how I dared start out alone for the Comanche country, and I told him that I had trapped the mountain lion and cut out and eaten his liver while still alive, and therefore feared nothing living. I could see that they were badly puzzled, and I increased their wonder by saying, as I finished my breakfast:

"Come. It is time to go. We have a long ride, and I am anxious to see your country."

When we set out, two in front and three behind, and no Indians were ever more puzzled. In later years I met one of them and he told me that their plan was to torture me as soon as I awoke. They were bent out of this by my queer remarks, intended just for that purpose. Several times during the day I expressed my impatience at our slow pace and asked them to get on faster, and when we went into camp I saw that I had them off their guard. After eating I sat apart from them to smoke and meditate and to give them an opportunity to compare notes. Just when the five got their heads together to discuss something they did not wish me to hear I arose and stepped backward out of the light of the fire, and I believe I was a hundred feet away when they missed me.

I heard them scatter and beat about, and while they were hunting for me I crawled along and got my gun. I crept away from the circle of the fire and then got the shelter of a tree. The Indians beat about for a good half hour, and then all came in, chagrined and disgusted. I lifted my gun and took fair aim at the leader. He went down as my rifle cracked and was followed by a second and a third before the surviving two could comprehend what was going on. Neither stopped for his gun.

I stood guard all night, and when morning came was satisfied that the two who had escaped had no idea of returning. After a scanty breakfast I caught up the six animals, packed up everything of value, and then I headed to the southeast for the river, and at 3 o'clock rode right into the camp of the party, which had settled down for sport and had given me no thought. Next day a party of us rode over to give the bodies a more careful inspection, and we found on each one a silver government medal, given them during Lincoln's first term, as "good Indians."

Shocking.

"Speaking of electrifying modern dances, have you seen the induction coil?"—Carroll Widow.
